Irish Workplace Safety & Portable Equipment

In Ireland, employers and those in control of workplaces have duties to ensure electrical equipment is maintained safely. Portable electrical equipment that is exposed to conditions likely to cause deterioration should be visually checked, periodically inspected by a competent person, and tested where appropriate. PAT testing provides a practical way to document this safety process.

Insurance & Audit Support

Many insurers, landlords and managing agents may request evidence that portable electrical appliances are being maintained and inspected. A clear PAT testing report helps show that electrical safety is being actively managed.

PAT testing frequency should be risk-based and depend on the type of equipment, how often it is used, the environment, and the likelihood of damage or deterioration.

Based on Irish workplace electrical safety obligations, including the Safety, Health and Welfare at Work (General Application) Regulations 2007.
